JUNE 2021

Inter-County Energy continues field inventory of entire system

Inter-County Energy's field inventory of its entire service territory that began in April 2021 will take approximately twenty-four months to complete.

GIS Landmark/Utility Mapping Services is conducting the field inventory on behalf of Inter-County Energy. For periodic updates, follow us on Facebook and check our cooperative website at www.intercountyenergy.net. We will keep you informed of the areas they are working in as they move across our system.

Utility Mapping Services vehicles will be properly marked to reflect the work being performed on behalf of Inter-County Energy. If you should have any questions or concerns, please call (888) 266-7322.

VACATION ELECTRICAL SAFETY

Don't forget about safety at home and on the road

Before you head out on vacation this summer, keep these safety tips in mind to help ensure a safer trip and a more pleasant homecoming.

- Light's on, but nobody's home. Instead of trying to fool burglars by leaving a single light or two on for a whole vacation, consider investing in a motion-sensing outdoor lighting system and multiple programmable timers for interior lighting.
- Unplug. Unplug all appliances and electronics that aren't necessary while you're gone. Unplugging them is one less worry from lightning strikes should an electrical storm blow in while you're away.
- Look out for hazards. Not every hotel room, condo and Airbnb you see online practices electrical safety.

Electricity is a great value.

400 cups = $1.00

28 loads = $1.00

208 hrs. of TV = $3.43

Value – it comes in many forms.
Ever think about what your energy dollars power?

We're happy to report that Kentucky's Special Olympics Summer Games are back. COVID-19 concerns forced cancellation of the 2020 games, but this year's event is happening.

Kentucky's Touchstone Energy Cooperatives, including Inter-County Energy, have taken a leading role in supporting the games for eight years now. We are a leading sponsor for the competition set for June 5 on the campus of Eastern Kentucky University.

The 2021 games will be limited to a single day of competition, and many protocols will be observed to protect participants' health and safety, says Trish Mazzoni, president and CEO of Special Olympics Kentucky.

What we love most about the games remains unchanged, however.

More than 1,000 special athletes from throughout the commonwealth will again have the opportunity to compete with their peers in five sports: aquatics, bocce, rhythmic gymnastics, soccer and track and field. And nearly 500 volunteers will be there to help the games run smoothly.

Supporting the summer games gives us an opportunity to remind the world about the principles we adhere to as a cooperative. In particular, it allows us to demonstrate our commitment to the communities we serve.

"Special Olympics is community-driven and predominantly a volunteer organization, so it's a great fit for co-op support," says Inter-County Vice President of Member Services Dan Hitchcock.

When the games were last held, nearly 100 Touchstone Energy co-op representatives were there. Working at the games is an annual family affair for some.

"Even after working all day, you feel better than when you arrived," says Member Services Advisor April Burgess, who explains why she enjoys volunteering at the games. "It's very rewarding to see the level of effort and the heart of the participants, and the special moments that occur throughout the day."

It's a pleasure for Inter-County Energy to once again be supporting Special Olympics' single biggest competitive event. Let the games begin ... again!
